

The following pre-theme sequence was abandoned because... er... it wasn't really funny... It's based around the Citroen 'transformer' car ads.

GARY Did I tell you my friend had a car accident in Tesco's?

KEELEY No!

GARY Yeh. I told you she'd got a new Citroen didn't I?

KEELEY Yeh.

GARY Well, she was just sitting in it in the car park...

KEELEY Oh god. Did someone hit the back of it?

GARY No. The car, all of a sudden, just lifted up and started to do a dance.

KEELEY Never!

GARY Yeh! It actually got up on its back wheels! And the worst thing is, which we didn't know at the time – they're actually advertising it doing that on the telly!!

KEELEY No!

GARY Yeh! I mean, I don't know how they get away with it. They've got a breakdancing car, and she's got 4 cracked ribs and a neck brace.

KEELEY Ooh dear.

GARY But they don't show you that on the advert, do they...

KEELEY No. Poor thing.

GARY Yeh. (pause)

KEELEY I like the music on that advert, though – do you?

GARY Oh yes.. yes..

KEELEY How does it go again?

GARY (doing his best impression) Jack diggy jack di-jack a jagga musac, a jack a jagga musak a bomda base.

KEELEY Yeh. That's it. Are we recording?

GARY Shit.
